SEES IN MOTOR CARS A WAY TO PROMOTE CHURCH

Automobile Parties in Country
May Aid Rural Clergy by Church Going.

Why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't the motor car be used to promote, rather than hinder, the church-going of the summer Sunday? Everybody knows that it is not. The clergy used to dread the rainy Sundays, says the Living Church, because of their disastrous effect upon Sunday congregations. Now they dread the bright Sundays, when everybody that is somebody is off riding in his automobile, leaving only the janitor, his wife and children, and the editor of the religious paper, to go to church. "The poor ye have always with you," and they are the only ones left on Sundays. Behold the long line of automobiles on Sunday morning headed for every country road, winding through the most remote country districts. These are not only the rich—though they are among them; those same individuals who are cursing the state in July for maintaining such impossible roads, while in November they will cheerfully cast their little ballots in favor of the candidate who has howled loudest for lower taxes. No, there are more people on these roads this bright, beautiful July Sunday than there are on the income tax roll of the state. The senior warden, his wife and family; the junior warden, the vestryman, the Sunday school superintendent and the teachers—it's vacation now, of course—the director of the Brotherhood chapter, the excellent presidentess of the Woman's Auxiliary, and she of the sewing society, the leading lights amidst the twilight of the Girls' Friendly society—there they all go, peeping more or less extravagantly at a weather-eye out for possible deputy sheriffs or motorcycle policemen. Shall the janitor and religious editor assume halos because they are not numbered amidst this cheerful throng of twentieth century Christians? No, forsooth, they will "join the majority" some day, when the great leveler shall have gathered them in—but not, while they live, on Sundays. Circumstances beyond their control have kept temptation out of their path. Of course it is their duty to go to church!

But—once more—why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't the motor car be used to promote church going? What a blessing, what an encouragement it would be to the parsons and the humble village folk within a range of 25 miles from Somebody's summer home, if Somebody's motor car would bring Somebody's family to each of those country churches some time during the summer! Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Somebody, of the loneliness, the friendliness, the isolation, that the country clergy so often feel? Have you read anything about the rural church problem? Do you know that there is an increasing sense of injustice, if not of bitterness, on the part of country clergy and church people, by reason of the lack of sympathy and the neglect which they receive from the Churchmen of the city? Did it ever occur to you that what these rural and village churches need from you isn't so much money as it is sympathy? And will you deny that this is just what you are not giving them?

You ride by, Mr. Somebody, on a Sunday morning, with your gay family, in your august touring car that costs you more for its maintenance in a month than you give for the spread of the gospel throughout all the world in three years. Why can't you run those roads up to the door of the homely little church, help your wife and family to alight, and take a real, sympathetic part in the homely worship that those homely farmer-folk are offering within its walls? Why don't you give some encouragement to the village missionary who is seeking to make bricks without straw in that rural community? His sermons wouldn't be so prosy if he had reason to believe that a few new listeners—people of such splendid intellectual caliber as you, Mr. Somebody—would drive up occasionally in their cars and take an intelligent part in the service. The

RECENT INTRUSION OF MAN.

The strongest opponents to the advance of civilization in west Central Africa, says Bishop Lambuth, the Methodist missionary, are the wild elephants. They break down fences, trample gardens, pull up trees and even telegraph poles, for no other apparent reason than because they object to anything strange in their familiar haunts. One savage monster nearly wrecked a small steam launch belonging to the mission on the upper reaches of the Congo.

The boat, with three white men, including the bishop, and a crew of five negroes, had tied up on the edge of a deep forest in a quiet bend of the river. A stout plank was laid as gangway from the bow to the bank, and the crew worked until nightfall cutting and piling firewood for the boat's furnace; then they came on deck for their evening meal. The three white men were already at dinner, when a fearful yell from the natives brought them out of the cabin to see a large elephant viciously attacking the woodpile. The blacks shouted and threw missiles, and two of the more venturesome even went ashore with firebrands snatched out of the cook stove to drive the monster away. But he paid no attention to them until he had demolished the woodpile, when he whipped one man with his trunk heels over head into the river, and chased the other back into the boat.

Thundering loudly, with red gullet open, tusks flashing and trunk flailing the air, he planted both tremendous forefeet on the gangplank. It bent until it cracked under his weight, but held stoutly, although the whole boat careened, and seemed ready to capsize.

In another moment the elephant had crossed the plank, and was astride it with hindfeet on the shore and forefeet on the boat. There he stood, afraid to advance to retreat, a gigantic image of baffled rage. In his fury he began stamping with those great forefeet, and the boat rocked crazily back and forth.

What might have happened, if the monster had come aboard with all his frenzied weight can only be imagined; for the captain by this time had fetched the only rifle on board and risked all on one shot, had thrust the muzzle almost into the gaping ## mouth and pulled the trigger.

Fortunately, the bullet lodged in the base of the brain. The elephant tumbled to his knees and into the water next the bank, his bulk thrusting the boat aside so suddenly that it snapped the bowlines—and sent the men staggering to the runways.

At the next government trading post the captain had two splendid tusks to show as the result of his cool daring; but to his astonishment he was arrested for shooting the elephant without a license. It was with great difficulty that the government official was convinced that the animal had been shot in self-defense. Even then he confiscated the ivory.—Youth's Companion.
